

ALEX J. BELL | SENIOR ASSOCIATE

Alex Bell joined Fletcher Farley Shipman & Salinas as a senior associate attorney in the Dallas office in 2014. He brings to the firm experience handling a variety of cases and civil appeals with complex research issues and motions. His practice focuses on complex and construction litigation, personal injury defense, products liability, professional liability as well as general tort defense.

While in law school, Alex won several prestigious moot court and mock trial competitions and now instructs students on advocacy for Baylor Law's competitive moot court and mock trial teams as a part-time Adjunct Professor and Lecturer in Advocacy at Baylor Law School. He is very active in the legal community as a Former Director of the Texas Young Lawyer's Association and has been appointed to the Committee on Administration of the Rules of Evidence for the State Bar of Texas for a three-year term.

Alex received his J.D. from Baylor University School of Law in 2009 and his Bachelor of Arts from the Honors College at Baylor University in 2006.
